

Teacher Performance Assessment Teacher Candidate Information Release Authorization

In order to complete the teacher preparation program at West Virginia University and obtain licensure in West Virginia, you must successfully complete the edTPA (Teacher Performance Assessment). This assessment includes submissions of short video recordings of your teaching, involving both the teacher candidate and various students. In the course of taping, students in the classroom will appear on the video recordings. You will also submit samples of student work as evidence of your teaching practice. No student's last name should appear on any materials that are submitted. You must obtain permission from the school's administrator and the parents/guardians of students you include in your edTPA learning segment. Approved forms are available in Live Text as well as through your West Virginia University teacher preparation program.

West Virginia University seeks your permission to use your portfolio materials, including the video recordings for educational purposes, which may include assessment development, program improvement, and professional development. Granting permission to WVU for these education purposes is entirely voluntary. Successful completion of the edTPA is a requirement for completing the teacher preparation program, but there will be no consequence or penalty if you choose not to grant permission to WVU to use your portfolio for additional educational purposes. The form below will be used to document your permission for these activities.
